

2^d Answer Enfield Chace was not the thing then in dispute, nor doe I remember any person being there that Said any thing of it at that time, the then dispute was in the Provincial Court Between Mr Roger Brooke the owner of Amptill Grange and one Anderson that lived on a part of the Tract called Essington.

3^d Answer I do not Remember that ever I measured the Distance Between the tree that Hobbs Swore to and the River but to the best of my memory and Judgment it is about two hundred yards from the said tree to the Banke Where Hobbs Swore he marked the Hickory which I took to be just above the River.

4th Answer I do not Justly remember the reason for running the lines [353] of Essington past the tree That Hobbs Swore to till it Struck the River: But do believe it was done before Hobbs proved the Tree Because that when he had been Sworn every one Seemed to be fully convinced and all the lands Depending on that tree was Esteemed to be Governed by it on his oath, and so continued to do while I was acquainted in the place which was Severall years

5th Answer Some time aft Hobbs had made proof to the said Tree (But how long I cannot remember) M^r Roger Brooke procured a Warrant from his Lordships land office to Resurvey Amptill Grange which I did as Surveyor Wcc began at the tree that Hobbs proved and So ran the Course and Distance I think of the first and second lines. The third I think was extended further then the Pattent expressed to Reach Patuxent River And then to the best of my remembrance we ran the Severall Meanders of the River till we came to the place were Essingtons last line had been Run to the River and So back to the first Tree, which Hobbs had proved, this I believe we did because Amptill Grange was Said to bend with the River
