

planks concerning women in public service will be unnecessary in future Democratic platforms.”...

Mrs. Tawes and I want to thank you sincerely for your kind hospitality. I look forward to this gathering each year with anticipation, feeling very much like a participant at a track meet who is holding his breath as the starting gun is raised.

I can assure you that after this weekend my colleagues, Daniel B. Brewster for United States Senator, Louis L. Goldstein, for State Comptroller, Thomas B. Finan, for Attorney-General, and Carlton Sickles, for Congressman-at-large, and I will be off and running.

---

ADDRESS, BREWSTER TESTIMONIAL DINNER

BALTIMORE

September 7, 1962

Congressman Brewster, Mrs. Brewster, Mrs. Petersam, members of the clergy, distinguished guests at the head table, ladies and gentlemen, and fellow Democrats. It is a distinct pleasure for me to be here tonight and take part in this tribute to Danny Brewster. We who have come to know him so well during the current campaign also have come to appreciate the qualities of the man well enough to know that the honor being bestowed upon him tonight is indeed well deserved.

I am sure that all of you are as familiar with his background as I am. A graduate of both Princeton and Johns Hopkins University, Danny first earned the gratitude of all of us as a Marine hero in World War Two. As a member of the Maryland House of Delegates from Baltimore County for two terms, Danny Brewster won wide acclaim and was subsequently elected United States Congressman from the Second District of Maryland. Now in his second term as a Congressman, Dan Brewster is on the threshold of a new career in the United States Senate. With your support and with the support of the citizens of Maryland vitally interested in the future of this nation, Congressman Brewster will embark on that career shortly after the general election on November 6.

The need for men like Dan Brewster in the Senate was perhaps best expressed not too long ago by two very prominent Democratic leaders in Washington. “Congressman Brewster has made an out-