

Hygiene is working toward a coordinated faculty plan for residency training in psychiatry.

But with the abundance of talent, training, intelligence and experience that has been brought together at this Conference, it would be presumptuous on my part to deal at too great a length with the professional and technical problems which you are so capable of handling. Suffice it to say that those of us who have been made responsible for the operation of our government are cognizant of the problem. And, more than that, we are eager to assist you in finding the solution.

I have looked at the agenda for this work conference and am impressed with its timeliness and its content. I wish you the greatest success in your efforts and await the conclusions you may draw from your deliberations

ADDRESS, DEDICATION OF BUSINESS AND PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION BUILDING
COLLEGE PARK

May 6, 1961

It has been a most satisfying experience to me as Governor of Maryland to watch the growth and improvement of this great University. This handsome building which we are dedicating here today is an expression of the will of the people of Maryland to support this institution which is the core of our effort to sustain a sound program of higher education. We are proud of the fact that it gives our College of Business and Public Administration one of the most modern facilities of its kind in the nation.

We in Maryland are firm in our belief that the true wealth of our State lies in the intellectual capacity of the people, and that our future will be determined by the development and refinement of the intellects and talents of our youth. We believe that the money which we have spent in erecting this building represents a positive investment in the future and will yield a manifold return in human progress and social betterment. With one strong voice, our commerce and our industry are calling for technicians and specialists with better training, on the one hand, and on the other, for a greater yield of raw executive material for management training.

It is the job of this University, and in particular of this College of Business and Public Administration, to give them both. It is the respon-
