

governmentally sanctioned gambling in the State, in coming up with some recommendations.

Q. Do you think it would be as effective in this State as in New York?

A. No, I think New York does many things well, but not everything well. And I'm not sure but that this is one of the things they might run into some trouble with.

Q. Are you against the lottery act?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Getting back to appointments, Governor, there is a judgeship vacancy in Baltimore City as a result of the retirement of Judge Moylan. How near are you to appointing someone?

A. Well, it's odd that you should ask that this morning because, as I went in to my desk while I was waiting for you to set up, I had a letter from the Bar Association of Baltimore City. I'd asked them to reconsider their nominees on the basis that this was a nonrotating judgeship, as Judge Foster had indicated at a recent meeting with the Supreme Bench, and I received a reply indicating that they had re-contacted all of the nominees. Each one had indicated his willingness to serve in a nonrotating basis. They still felt that it should be a rotating basis, that the person should be qualified to rotate even if he is assigned fairly substantially to juvenile work. And they sent back the same list of nominees that they had given me originally. I haven't yet heard from the State Bar. I have heard from the Plaintiffs' Bar of Baltimore City, and I haven't yet heard from the Municipal Bar Association. As soon as I get those lists in, which should be in a relatively few days, I should be in a position to move on that point.

Q. Governor, Anderson recently complained about press inaccuracies. How do you feel about press coverage?

A. I'm very satisfied with the way I've been treated by the press. I made this statement many times when I was County Executive. I said a few things I wish I hadn't said, but I have never complained about inaccuracies in the coverage that I have had. Sometimes things are emphasized and accentuated that you prefer not to have emphasized, but that is a matter of judgment of the reporter as to where the story lies. I certainly have no complaint.

Q. Governor, are you happy with Time Magazine's story on you, inside, and are you happy that you didn't make the cover of Time?

A. I am very happy to be on the inside.
