

1966, if I remember correctly. I want to discuss it with Mr. Wilson, the chairman of the Trustees. I think you'll remember that we, in our supplemental budget, gave a considerable amount of additional money to the State College system and we felt it completely within the prerogative of the Trustees as to how that money was to be spent. So again this doesn't involve a judgment of the Governor's office, but a judgment of the Board of Trustees of the State College system.

(Presidential Primary)

Q. Governor, if a presidential primary is decided upon it is going to cost roughly $750,000. Where's the State going to get the money?

A. I don't know. It has to be decided on before I begin to worry about that.

Q. Is this a source of concern?

A. Well, at this moment I can't be concerned with every contingency that may occur. I've got too many concerns that are here and immediate such as deciding what to do with the Nelson Committee recommendations with respect to the Medicaid crisis and so forth. These are with us right now. I've got to tackle them before I take on the contingent ones. Of course, I'm concerned about them.

(Meeting with Richard Nixon)

Q. Governor, will you be meeting with Richard Nixon in the near future?

A. Yes, as a matter of fact, Mr. Nixon has invited me to have lunch with him tomorrow for the purpose of going over generally some matters of concern with respect to positions in the party. I think he wants to let me know how he feels about certain very critical issues and to get some of my thinking on them. I am delighted to communicate with party leadership, and as a matter of fact we have a very grave obligation as members of a political party to make certain that we have the best possible communications. So I will go. I will return tomorrow evening.

Q. In Washington?

A. This will be in New York.

Q. Would you expect to come out of the meeting flying the Nixon flag, Governor? Will it change anything?

A. I'd say it's unlikely that I would do that. I don't expect to make a quick judgment about what my posture's going to be in view of the new developments with regard to Governor Rockefeller. We're still
