

that I was with Child and his servant and he would do what pleased with me and according to what he said he did but in answer to what he said that I was with Child I answered him that if I were with Child it was his and that he was the father of it. He answered that if I would say it upon him he would forgive it and further asked me if I was sure it was no other person but his I answered him that I was sure it was his and no other. Then he asked me if my master Capt^a Colborne had not occupied me I answered him no never he answered me and I said surely he thought he had. And further said did he not occupy you when your master was up the bay. I said he he might very well see it for said he to me you sit at ware to his bed side as you do to mine I answered him no for that there was a wall between us. After he replied and said that if my master Capt^a Colborne had but once occupied me that I should be sure not to spare him but to say he Child to him forswearing as he was left able to maintain it I answered and said no he never offered any such thing then replied he and said that he was sure he had occupied me forswearing as my master Capt^a Colborne his conscience did prick him which made him so earnest to have come to him for assistance as he doubted and was afraid I would say the Child to him. I replied and said no for he need not fear any such thing forswearing as he knew he never motioned any thing tending to dishonour ^{any thing of} and on the seventeenth day of the afore^d month of thebruary or thereabouts it being on Sunday night after I was abed he called me to go to bed to him I answered him as he bid me quiett and make no noise. Still pulling me and drawing the covering from me and at length saying I would not go to bed
