

1 freezing-in concepts. I think that the best that can be
2 said for the entire argument of specific versus general
3 is the addage that I heard in my first week of the Con-
4 vention from the gentleman who said I think this Constitu-
5 tion should be very general except in those areas in 6 which I am particularly knowledgeable. In those he sug-
7 gested they should be very specific and with that brief
8 background, I should like to now go into somewhat of the 9 step-by-step determination.

10 I might add in parentheses that many actions
11 have been taken by the Committee of the Whole in our wait 12 for the presentation of this article, consequently these 13 actions will have affected some of the decisions made by 14 the committee in its initial presentation, we will therefore 15 move at the appropriate time to amend or strike out those 16 provisions which have been accomplished by other committees
17 of the Convention.

18 Section 1 and 4 which will be taken together,
19 will be considered first in our majority report. The most 20 that can be said for the language here is that it appears 21 in many instances for the most part to be identical.
