

1 Assembly were killed. We would anticipate that the 2 General Assembly would, prior to such a disaster, indicate 3 that in the event that a quorum were not alive or could 4 not be called there would be some other method of operating 5 the General Assembly.

6 We would anticipate that if all the constitutional 7 officers were wiped out so that the orderly filling of 8 vacancies could not take place in a disaster that the 9 General Assembly would pass legislation prior to such 10 an emergency saying in such event the governor shall be 11 selected under these circumstances or the governor shall 12 be the man who holds office in this particular area.

13 The same thing for the operation of government --
14 if you can't get a General Assembly together and you can't 15 appropriate funds because of a disaster, government would 16 be stalemated, and we would contemplate therefore that 17 the General Assembly would pass laws which, despite 18 constitutional provisions, would in an emergency allow 19 the disbursement of state monies, even though it could not 20 otherwise be constitutionally accomplished.

21 We debated the inclusion of this at some
