

1 to appoint the competent and to remove the incompetent.

2 Our increasingly difficult problems of crime and 3 juvenile and adult delinquency will not be solved by 4 the constitution we draft, but we can in the constitution
5 provide the cornerstone which will form a basis for 6 the solution of those problems. I firmly believe that 7 crime and delinquency can be controlled if we have wide-8 spread respect for the law by citizens in every social and 9 economic strata.

10 We can have such widespread respect for the law
11 if we provide in the constitution for a judicial system 12 capable of administering justice -- justice as between 13 the state and the individual and justice as between man 14 and man -- speedily, efficiently and with finality; but, 15 to do this, we must provide at every level of the judicial 16 system judges who are trained in the law, judges who are 17 not only not mediocre or barely qualified, or even highly 18 qualified, but judges at every level of the judicial system
19 who are the best available -- the best of the best.

20 We must provide a system which will create courts 21 that are unmistakably courts so that every person knows when he enters the courtroom that he is in a court of law
