

1 it be passed by the majority of the whole house by the 2 members elected, and on this final action the whole Yeas
3 and Nays shall be recorded."

4 They did not list this vote on the changes
5 of the bond issue, and the Court of Appeals ruled since
6 this constitutional requirement was not technically complied
7 with, the bill was invalid.

8 So the point I am making is that the courts
9 construe these constitutional requirements procedurally
10 very, very strictly.

11 Now, the amendment I am offering would eliminate 12 the requirement that the committee vote be made part of the 13 journal. This simply is going to mean that every bill may 14 be subject to attack if the journal does not have the com-
15 mittee vote, and I assume the committee vote will mean a 16 main committee and not a subcommittee of a standing committee.
17 It will require a normal vote, and every bill will be 18 established whereby the Chairman of the Committee will 19 have to certify the committee vote with the bill, and it will 20 have to be entered into the record.

21 It will mean the question of whether there was
