

1 DELEGATE BOTHE: I don't think that belongs
2 in the declaration of rights. Our Constitution doesn't
3 deal with a number of them. For instance, under free 4 speech you deal with libel and give a citizen a right of 5 action against another for his use of free speech.

6 The Constitution can't be pure on this subject 7 matter. The state is what must effectuate the right. If 8 you have the right, it is the courts and the executive and 9 the various aspects of government that make it a reality.

10 THE CHAIRMAN: Delegate Hutchinson.

11 DELEGATE HUTCHINSON: Delegate Bothe, under 12 your provision, if your provisions happen to be 13 adopted by this Convention, what recourse would a small 14 employer have?

15 I am thinking of a particular example, say, if 16 a man owns a laundry and he has 20 employees and the 17 employees bargain collectively, and he cannot meet their 18 demands, and they refuse to work.

19 What recourse does he have? Can he fire them
20 and hire someone else?

21 THE CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bothe.
