

adopted on second reading, so that we have not been undoing what was done on second reading. We have merely been amending the rules which would provide that we go directly from second reading to third reading without an amendment so as to permit an amendment in between.

Therefore, what we have been doing is amending sections adopted on second reading without going back to second reading.

Now, if you will get in front of you page 1-1, there were a number of errors. Pages 1-1 and 1-2 have been corrected and re-printed. You should have on your desk now the corrected page. They will be distributed right now. You can substitute it. So that there will be no confusion, tear up your existing page 1-1, on the back of which is 1-2. Just tear it up.

The pages will also distribute to you corrected pages 2-1 and 2-1A. Take out of your book pages 2-1 and 2-2. That is one sheet. Tear it, and substitute for it, two sheets, marked 2-1, 2-1A, 2-2.

You also received page 7-3. Take out your page 7-3. Destroy it. You will receive a new one. Destroy 7-3. You will get a new one. Destroy all your page 1-3 and 1-4.

Let me go back over it. These are the pages to be destroyed. 1-1 and 1-2. That is one sheet. 1-3 and 1-4, is one sheet. 2-1 and 2-2 is two sheets, I mean one sheet. You will receive two sheets, marked 2-1, 2-1A and 2-2, and 7-3. It has nothing on the back.

One other sheet to be destroyed, 3-1, on the back of which is 3-2.

You should have, in order to have the complete constitution, five sets.

The first has Constitutional Convention Memorandum as the heading, marked, Draft Constitution. That comprises articles 1, 2; secondly, article 3; thirdly, article 4; fourthly, articles 5, 6, 7, and 8; and lastly, articles 9 and 10.

Now, will you please follow me for a few minutes?

There are a few errors which you can correct very readily with pencil. Will you please follow me?

DELEGATE JAMES: Mr. President, can you give us a memorandum on this?

THE PRESIDENT: All right. We will get it out to you tomorrow.

There is one more. That is it.

We will reproduce the memorandum and leave it on your desks.

I had given you all the corrections, but you can check them against the memorandum.

You now have properly substituted the pages and corrections. You now have a complete copy of the constitution as amended on second reading and as amended yesterday after second reading, but not including the additional amendment adopted tonight by the addition of section 2.14. Other than that, you have the complete edition.

Delegate Lord.

DELEGATE LORD: Mr. President, while we are making corrections, I have just been talking to Chairman Penniman and I think on page 8-1, line 32, there is a minor change. The third word on that line is the word "the" in italics. I think it should be "their".

THE PRESIDENT: What line?

DELEGATE LORD: Line 32, and then the following word "fund". That is all right. Then the word "thereof" should be stricken, 8-1.

THE PRESIDENT: I think you are quite right, Delegate Lord. I think the confusion came about because the words "the fund thereof" changed to "their fund" was on one line and we restored the following line.

In a few minutes I think Delegate Penniman will indicate to the Committee on Style how many hours and minutes of sleep they will have tonight. The rest of
