

A. One act was, desiring the success of the rebel army over our army; another act, was desiring the dissolution of this Union and the recognition of the Southern Confederacy, oppositon to this government raising men and money for the suppressing the rebellion, trading and trafficking with the States in rebellion, hurrahing for Jeff Davis and other causes which I don't at this time recollect.

16th. Did you or not enquire of persons applying for registration, how they had voted at previous elections?

A. In one particular base we did, in the case of Mr. Crisfield and Mr. Henry, but before we made the enquiry, we asked them if they heard Mr Crisfield and Mr. Henry, speak in Court House in Princess Anne, that if they heard Mr. Henry say that he would not vote for a man or a dollar to carry on the war, that he would vote for the recognition of the independence of the Southern Confederacy, and that any man who voted for Mr. Henry, knowing that if he were elected to Congress, he would vote for the recognition of the Southern Confederacy, he was in our estimation a disloyal man.

17th. Did you or not, exclude persons from registration as qualified voters, who did vote for Mr. Henry?

A. Not on that ground alone.

18th. What additional evidence did you require?

A. If they knew Mr. Henry's views, we considered that enough. There were some men registered whom we did believe voted for Mr. Henry, but said that they did not know his views.

19th. Did you always require evidence on oath as to the acts of disqualification?

A. We did.

20th. Did you give notice to all parties of charges against them and give them opportunity to disprove or refute them and to cross-examine the witnesses against them?

A. We did not in all cases, where it was convenient, we did; we put ourselves to no great trouble about it.

21st. When did you cease to receive applications for registration?

A. At our last meeting in September, except those who were sick or absent and could not attend.

22nd. When did you finally close your books?

A. I think it was on the first day of November, 1865.

23d. Did you make no entries on them, of persons entitled or rejected after that day?

A. We did not.
