

A. He said he was in favor of recognizing the Southern Confederacy, and that was enough for me.

54th. Did he or not say he would vote for the recognition of the Southern Confederacy rather than have war, if the thing could not be settled otherwise?

A. I don't recollect any such observation. Written questions were handed to Mr. Henry to answer. He said he would not vote one man or one dollar. To the question, "Will you vote for the recognition of the Southern Confederacy?" the answer he made was, "I will." I don't recollect of any qualification.

55th. What was proved against Wm Dryden?

A. Mr. Dryden refused to answer question on oath.

56th. Did he take the oath?

A. He did.

57th. Did he assign any reason?

A. I don't recollect his whole language. He flew into a passion and said a great deal, refusing to answer the question, and we could not get at whether he was loyal or not.

58th. What question did he refuse to answer?

A. I don't recollect.

59th. In the discharge of your duty did you consider a man bound to answer all questions which you chose to propound to him?

A. Only such questions as touching his right to registration.

60th. Did you ask this question of the applicants: "Have you ever sympathized with the South?"

A. I do not recollect of having asked that question of a single individual.

61st. What was the usual form in which you put the question intended to ascertain the applicant's sympathies?

A. I know of no usual form. "Have you rejoiced at the victories of the South?" "Which did you desire should gain the victory?" &c., &c.

62d. Do you remember the cause of disqualification of William E. Fleming?

A. I don't recollect, more than general disloyalty.

63d. Do you remember what testimony W. T. Marrines gave in the case of John E. Hayward.

A. I cannot say that I do.

64th. Do you remember the admission of Henry T. Johnson?
