

Question. Was there a general attendance at the polls in said district on the day above named; and did you or not see any registered voters there who did not offer to vote under the above circumstances of intimidation; if so, name them, and state if you know for whom they would have voted for State Senator had they not been thus intimidated, and to which political party they belonged?

(Objected to by Dr. Ohr.)

Answer. There was a general attendance on said day, and I saw there registered voters who did not vote by reason of said intimidation. The name of one of them so intimidated is John Ridder, Jr., who would have voted for Alfred Spates for State Senator; said Ridder belonged to the Conservative party. I understood there were others who were so intimidated.
