

What is to be observed at the time of passing the account.

must appear, on being thereto summoned, and in open court produce receipts for the payment of the balance appearing due on the face of said account,—which being complied with, they are thence discharged: but if no payment hath been made, then they are to enter into bond, with two sureties for the due performance thereof. Which last transaction is final and conclusive, as to any further proceedings before the commissary general, by such executors or administrators.

The further care and management of orphans, and their estates, is from thenceforth committed to the county courts; who are directed as to the choice and appointment of guardians to orphans; into whose hands the orphan's estate is entrusted, until the orphan shall be of lawful age to receive the same.

---

The following promiscuous collection of useful observations, is added, as a supplement to the foregoing directions to executors and administrators.

---

Negroes, how to be disposed of.

The frequent contentions between the administrators, and the representatives of deceased persons, with regard to the detention of negroes