CHAPTER 134.

AN ACT for the preservation of Wild Fowl in the Potomac River, and its tributary streams.

Supplement, 1836, ch. 105.

WHEREAS, the general assembly of the commonwealth of Virginia, on the third day of March, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, passed an act, entitled, an act for the preservation of fish and wild fowl in the waters of the Potomac, and its tributary streams. Now, in order to give full effect to the aforesaid law of the commonwealth of Virginia, so far as it regards the shooting of wild fowl, and for the further purpose of suppressing the mal-practices of divers persons who use such means of killing wild fowl, that they are in danger of being wholly destroyed or driven from the waters of this state, to the great detriment of the citizens thereof, and the community at large; And whereas, it is represented to this legislature by a large and respectable number of the citizens of this state, that persons living upon the waters of the Potomac, and its tributary streams, are subjected to great Preamble.
