

- Record of requisitions. sick, whether they be admitted or not; he shall note their diseases, prescriptions and treatment, and in case of death, their age, place of birth, time of death, and every thing which he may deem necessary; this record shall remain at the prison, and be open to the inspection of the authorities thereof.
- List of ex-empt. When absent, he shall procure some one to attend in his place, to be approved by the monthly committee or directors; he shall have such aid as he may require, on information to the warden; none shall interfere with the treatment of the sick or the conduct of the hospital, except so far as may be necessary to enforce discipline; he shall examine convicts at their admission, and note their bodily defects for the direction of the warden in assigning their tasks; when any thing is necessary for the hospital, he must make a requisition on the warden, and keep an account thereof, to be noted in his monthly report to the board of directors; he must make a report to the board monthly, of the health of the prison, including post mortem examinations, and furnish the warden daily with a list of those exempted from labour or reported sick.
- Discipline. The discipline of the prison must be rigidly enforced in this department, by the presence of proper officers; the patients may be nursed and attended to by convicts, but they shall not have charge of or access to the medicines at any time; these shall be at all times under the direction and care of the assistant warden or guard in this department; convicts shall not be discharged while labouring under disease, except at their own request.
- The deceased. The bodies of deceased convicts may be claimed by their friends, or devoted to scientific examination, at the medical schools, or buried in Potter's Field.
- Chaplain's duties. Article 8. Chaplain.—The chaplain shall conform to the general rules and regulations of the prison, and be under the direction of the warden. He shall attend chapel service every Sunday, and the Sunday school shall be under his charge. He shall avail himself of all proper times for giving the convicts moral and religious and other instruction, and for this purpose may visit them in their cells on Sunday, and before nine o'clock at night, and in the hospital. He must report quarterly to the board, of the progress of his labours, and shall be furnished with such books as he may require. He shall call to a convict any clergyman of the sect of the convict, or any whom he may desire, and afford every opportunity for proper intercourse. He shall keep a record of the past history and incidents in the lives of the convicts, and of their future prospects when discharged, with a view to ascertain the effect of punishment, and he shall at all times impress upon them a sense of the justice of their sentence and necessity for their amendment.
