CHAP. 12. An act for the impounding of distresses. (Part.)

As to the 2d section, although there is no alteration of the law so as to prevent distresses from being impounded, yet it seldom if ever happens that they are so; and if otherwise, the sum allowed in this section could not be applicable to the province, considering the difference in point of time and the value of money. By the act of 1715, Ch. 31, S. 11, the allowance for impounding horses found out of their enclosures was 5s. or 60*lb.* tobacco.

As to the 3d section, it is necessary to refer to the note on 52 Hen. 3, Ch. 21, in which it is shewn that the sheriffs in the province never exercised the power therein given, and of course they could
