

calendar by which, among other uses, Easter day, &c. in any year are to be discovered until the year 1899, and which is referred to by the makers of Almanacs. There are, however, some parts of the calendar which are not necessary to be continued. These are the lessons for morning and evening prayer, which, under our constitution are to be considered as matters to be regulated by religious societies themselves, and not by law. The same may be said as to the moveable feasts and holy-days, (excepting by custom, Easter and Whitsuntide,) and as to all the feasts throughout the year, except Sundays and Christmas day. The same as to the vigils, fasts and days of abstinence; also the solemn days for which particular services were appointed, to wit: The 5th of November, the 30th of January and the 29th of May, respecting which we have ceased to feel any interest.

CHAP. 44. An act for rendering justices of the peace more safe in the execution of their office; and for indemnifying constables and others, acting in obedience to their warrants. (Part.)

The 2d section, respecting the tender of amends, &c. was probably in force, and if so, is proper to be continued.

25 George 2.—A. D. 1752.

CHAP. 6. An act for avoiding and putting an end to certain doubts and questions relating to the attestation of wills and codicils, concerning real estates in that part of Great-Britain called England, and in his majesty's colonies and plantations in America.

This statute, as appears from the title, was to extend to the province, and it is known to have been practised under. See Deputy Commissary's Guide, p. 75. I find no provision in the testamentary law to interfere with this statute, which is therefore considered proper to be incorporated, &c.

CHAP. 30. An act to amend an act, made in the last session of parliament, entitled, An act for regulating the commencement of the year; and for correcting the calendar now in use. (Part.)

See the note on 24 George 2, Ch. 23, except as to such parts as related particularly to London.

29 George 2.—A. D. 1756.

CHAP. 31. An act to enable infants, lunatics and femes covert, to surrender leases in order to renew the same.

See the note on 4 George 2, Ch. 10.

11 George 3.—A. D. 1771.

CHAP. 20. An act to enable lunatics entitled to renew leases, their guardians and committees to accept of surrenders of old leases, and grant new ones.

See the notes on 29 George 2, Ch. 31, and 4 George 2, Ch. 10.
