

account of corporeal infirmity, unless he shall obtain from the surgeon or surgeon's mate of the regiment or battalion to which he belongs, if any, or if none, from such respectable physician of the neighborhood or county to which he belongs as the commanding officer may name, a certificate of such inability, and the same be endorsed by said captain or commanding officer.

7. The enrolment and arrangement of the militia of this State into divisions, brigades, regiments, battalions, squadrons and companies, as numbered and recorded in the office of the adjutant general, shall continue, subject to be altered as provided in this article.

8. A Major General may call a meeting of the Brigadiers of his division at some central place therein, and at a convenient time to be by him appointed, who, or a majority of whom when so met, may revise and alter the arrangements and bounds of the several brigades within the division.

9. A Brigadier General may call together the colonels, lieutenant colonels and majors of his brigade at some convenient time and place to be by him appointed, who, or a majority of whom when so met, may revise and alter the arrangement and bounds of their several regiments, battalions and squadrons.

10. The several commanding officers of regiments, extra battalions and squadrons, shall convene from time to time as may be necessary, the commanding officers of companies in their respective regiments, battalions or squadrons, at some convenient time and place to be by them severally appointed, who, or a majority of whom when so met, may make any alterations they may deem necessary in the arrangements and bounds of their several battalions, squadrons or companies.

11. The said several officers shall respectively report by mail to the adjutant general, any alteration that may be made in the bounds and arrangements of their several commands, and the said report shall be recorded in the office of the Adjutant General.

12. If the commanding officer of any division, brigade, regiment, battalion, squadron or company shall neglect or refuse to give order for assembling his command, or the officers thereof, when thereto lawfully commanded by his superior officer, or at