

by them respectively, as may be necessary for the repair of the roads therein.

95. Any person who, when required under the preceding section to furnish his proportion of labor upon the public roads in his district, shall neglect or refuse to furnish the same, shall forfeit not exceeding two dollars a day for each laborer refused or neglected to be sent under such requirement, and the county commissioners shall add the same to the other taxes of such delinquent, to be collected therewith.

96. The county commissioners of said county shall, at least sixty days before an election of road supervisors in said county, determine what amount of salary each supervisor shall receive for the ensuing year, and so from year to year determine his salary; or they may, instead of a fixed and regular salary, fix and determine a certain per diem compensation to the supervisors.

97. They may, when they deem it expedient, require the supervisor to appoint a sufficient number of deputy supervisors, and if the supervisors shall for twenty days thereafter fail so to appoint deputies, they may appoint the same, prescribe their duties and fix their compensation.

98. In all cases where a certain annual salary is determined upon, the compensation to the deputies shall be paid out of said salary, and where a per diem is determined upon, a per diem shall also be fixed for the deputies.

99. The county commissioners of said county may levy upon the assessable property of the county and pay the expenditures for the repair of the roads and the incidental expenses thereof, or they may levy upon each district for the amount of such expenditures, and all incidental expenses thereof in such district.

100. Upon complaint, on oath, of any citizen that any part of the roads in said county is and has been for ten days out of repair, the county commissioners, upon being satisfied that the supervisor has neglected to repair the same, may fine such supervisor not less than five nor more than fifty dollars for such neglect, and retain the same out of any salary or compensation provided for such supervisor.
