

and who shall serve for two years from the date of their appointment, and until their successors shall be appointed.

120. The trustees shall ascertain the number of white children between the ages of five and twenty-one years in their respective school districts, and annually report the same to the school commissioners.

121. They shall, in any district where there is no school house, select some suitable and central site, secure the same by purchase, gift or condemnation, and make arrangements for the erection and furnishing of a school house thereon.

122. They shall exercise a supervisory control over the management of the schools in their respective districts, by appointing teachers, determining upon vacations, times for public examinations, persons to conduct the same, and doing such other things as they may deem necessary for the promotion of the best interests of the schools under their respective supervision.

123. They shall have power to discharge teachers for incompetency, neglect of duty, or immoral deportment, and also to dismiss pupils for impracticable insubordination or gross immoral conduct.

124. They shall admit no child in any school who is under the age of five years, or over the age of twenty-one, unless where, in their judgment, this rule should be dispensed with.

125. They shall require the teachers in their respective schools to keep a register of the names and ages of their pupils and their daily attendance, and report the same to them at the end of each scholastic year, which report they shall deliver to the board of school commissioners.

126. They shall not employ as teacher any person who shall not furnish from the board of school commissioners a certificate that he is a person of good moral character and capable of instructing thoroughly in the elementary branches of an English education, which shall be the lowest standard of qualification of teachers.

127. If they appoint any person as teacher who shall not furnish such certificate, he shall not be entitled to any compensation under this law.