

with each county, however, being enacted by the respective boards of county commissioners sitting as a District Council.

The Commission is also empowered to make, adopt, and amend a general regional plan for the physical development of the Maryland-Washington Regional Districts, including all factors of urban, suburban, rural and regional planning. It is given specific subdivision control power, and jurisdiction over building permits as to zoning requirements, over street grades, location of streets, etc. The administrative expenses of the Commission are paid from an administrative tax levied within the said District.
