Green Ridge Forestry Camp for Boys was established in May 1955 as a specialized institution to be operated by the State Department of Forests and Parks. It serves 16, 17, and 18 year old boys who have been committed to either the Maryland Training School For Boys or Boys' Village; who are in good physical health; and who are interested in active outdoor living. Green Ridge was created in the belief that boys could be guided back to good citizenship while performing valuable work in the conservation of natural resources. During the first two years of its operation, the camp has served a total of 243 boys. The average daily population during fiscal year 1957 was 28 boys.
