WIN OFFICES

The Work Incentive Program (WIN) is a federally funded program specifically designed and directed to assist the transition of persons receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) from welfare to work. Authorized by 1967 amendments to title IV of the Social Security Act, WIN is administered, at the national level, jointly by the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare. Amendments to the Act which became effective July 1, 1972 made provision for the mandatory registration of AFDC adults for available work or training for work.

Exempt from this registration requirement were the aged, infirm, caretakers of the young or incapacitated family members, and mothers with children under age 6. This decision is made by the Income Maintenance Unit of the Social Services Administration which refer all non-exempt AFDC applicants and recipients to WIN.

The 1971 amendments mandated emphasis on immediate job placement whenever practicable. However, those manpower and social services which will contribute directly to immediate placement are to be provided. The necessary social services are provided through the Separate Administrative Unit of the Social Services Administration. Also required is that at least one-third of the manpower funds will be spent for on-the-job-training and public service employment. Individual initiative on the part of registrants is encouraged and the development of job finding and job retention skills are stressed. WIN also coordinates with CETA and other manpower programs to supplement WIN sponsored training for its registrants. Cooperation from the ES Job Bank and all other divisions of ESA have contributed to WIN's success as an important strategy for moving AFDC recipients from dependence on welfare to economic self sufficiency.
