

The Juvenile Services Administration certifies for operation within the State the public and private institutions, organizations, and agencies that deal with the Department in the area of juvenile delinquency.

The Administration supervises two State training schools. It develops and promulgates regulations, standards of care, and policies affecting the operation and management of programs serving children in these schools.

The Administration also supervises the State's four Youth Centers for delinquent boys. These Centers were formerly known as Forestry Camps. Boys who could benefit from such care are transferred to the Centers from Boys' Village, Montrose School, and the Maryland Training School for Boys, and through direct commitment from various State courts and jurisdictions.

The Administration supervises intake, probation, and after-care post-institutional supervision and counseling staff to all juvenile courts. Probation and after-care are separate functions. Probation involves the supervision of youngsters who are adjudicated delinquent but not institutionalized. After-care includes the supervision and counseling of youngsters for a prescribed period of time after their release from an institution (Code Health-General Article, Title 6).
