

The Division of Correction operates seven minimum security pre-release units that provide work and other rehabilitative opportunities for men, and one that provides the same services for women. These facilities house mainly inmates who are participating in the Work Release Program. Before assignment to one of the pre-release units, inmates are carefully screened at the Reception Center or at the institutions to which they are assigned.

The minimum security pre-release units were originally established as work camps in 1955, and subsequently were known as correctional camps (Code 1957, Art. 27, sec. 689f). They were renamed pre-release units in September 1978. The Central Laundry Facility was established in 1960 to serve the laundry needs of institutions under the jurisdiction of the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene. The Sandy Point Correctional Camp was relocated in Jessup and its name changed to the Maryland Correctional Camp Center by Chapter 385, Acts of 1966. Effective July 1978, the two Pre-Release Units established under the Community Adult Rehabilitation Centers (CARC) legislation—the Community Corrections Center for Women in Baltimore and the CARC Center on Greenmount Avenue in Baltimore City—were placed under the jurisdiction of the new correctional pre-release system (Code 1957, Art. 27, secs. 706–710E).

In 1979, the camp known as the Maryland Correctional Camp Center was converted to a medium security facility. This facility, now the Brockbridge Correctional Facility, however, continues to be operated by the Maryland Correctional Pre-Release System.

The Baltimore City Correctional Center opened in July, 1984, as part of the Pre-Release System. With a capacity for 250 inmates, the Center is located at 901 Greenmount Avenue.

The State Use Industries Advisory Committee was created within the Division of Correction in 1981 (Chapter 661, Acts of 1981). The Committee is responsible for recommending the establishment and maintenance of industrial plants and service centers within the Division of Correction. These plants and centers are used to implement State Use Industries programs developed by the Commissioner of Correction and the general manager of State Use Industries. Operated primarily with inmates, the sites are run in a manner beneficial to the State, and they provide training for inmates.

State Use Industries provides services and produces goods needed and used by 1) State institutions or agencies; 2) political subdivisions of the State; 3) any federal institution or agency; 4) any institution, agency, or political subdivision of another state; and 5) any charitable, civic, educational, fraternal, or religious association, institution, or agency for its own use and not for resale to others within one year of purchase.

The Advisory Committee consists of eleven ex officio members and four representatives of private industry appointed by the Governor for three-year terms. The General Manager of State Use Industries serves as executive secretary (Code 1957, Art. 27, sec. 681A).
