The Governor created the Governor's Commission on Teacher Salaries and Incentives in November 1986 at the request of the General Assembly (Joint Resolution no. 11, Acts of 1986). The Commission is to examine how the availability and quality of teachers are related to the financial and nonfinancial rewards of teaching in public schools. Specifically, the Commission will determine what salary increases, if any, are required to attract well-qualified teachers; what other incentives would encourage outstanding teachers to teach at schools that have difficulty attracting the best teachers; and what funding changes, if any, are necessary to ensure that each school system has a well-trained, highly motivated teaching staff.
