

of Science degree. The College became Coppin State Teachers College at its present location in 1952.

In acknowledgement of the goals and objectives of the College, the Board of Trustees ruled in 1963 that the institution's degree-granting authority would no longer be restricted to teacher education. Following this ruling, Coppin was renamed Coppin State College, and in 1967, the first Bachelor of Arts degree was conferred.

Coppin provides an academic program which includes the Divisions of: Arts and Sciences; Education; Nursing; Graduate Studies; and Continuing Education.

The University of Baltimore was founded in 1925 as a private coeducational institution. To serve working adults, the University initially offered evening programs and in 1927 added day courses as well. In 1970, Eastern College and the Mt. Vernon School of Law merged with the University of Baltimore and in 1973, the former Baltimore College of Commerce became affiliated with it. The University of Baltimore joined the Maryland State system of higher education in 1975. At that time, it was designated an upper-division (junior-senior level) and graduate university.

University programs are administered through the Yale Gordon College of Liberal Arts, the Robert G. Merrick School of Business, and the School of Law. The University houses the William Donald Schaefer Center for Public Policy, the Hoffberger Center for Professional Ethics, and the Center for Business and Economic Studies.

Career-oriented students are drawn to the University. Half of its 5,000 students are undergraduates and half are graduate students. More than 80 percent of the students work full- or part-time. University services and programs are designed to support working students with a strong cooperative education program for undergraduates, convenient student service hours, and flexible scheduling of classes and programs.
