The Eastern Shore campus at Princess Anne had diverse affiliations and several names before becoming the University of Maryland Eastern Shore (UMES) in 1970. The institution was founded in 1886 as the Delaware Conference Academy for Negroes, under the general control of what became known as Morgan College, then a private institution in Baltimore. By the Morrill Act of 1890, the Academy received federal funds and was renamed the Princess Anne Academy. This funding created a relationship with the then Maryland Agricultural College, although the campus continued to be a part of Morgan College. College level work began at Princess Anne in 1927. The State authorized purchase of the Academy in 1935 (Chapter 548, Acts of 1935) and, in 1936, Princess Anne Academy became part of the University of Maryland, bearing the name of Maryland State College from 1948 until 1970. In 1970, the College was renamed University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

With 2,637 students enrolled in 1993, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore offers curricula in the arts and sciences, business, agriculture, and other areas;

preprofessional training; extension education; and marine, estuarine and environmental sciences. Research and public service centers at the University include the Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Experiment Station, Institute for Eastern Shore Studies, and the Soybean Research Institute.
