The Governor's Science Advisory Council originated as the Governor's Science Resources Advisory Council in 1963. By Executive Order, the Governor reorganized the Council in 1970 as the Governor's Science Advisory Council.

The Council provides the Governor with objective scientific and technological advice. The Council identifies potential problems in all fields to which scientific approaches can be applied, formulates recommendations to alleviate these problems, and defines problem areas for which committees could find solutions or recommendations for action. The Council also defines scientific areas needing additional research or data analysis, reviews available resources to perform such analysis, and recommends the approach to be used. The Council further works to improve scientific education and identifies areas for graduate studies that will be of value to the State.

At the Governor's request or with the Governor's approval, the Council provides scientific and technological advice to the principal executive departments of State government. It also serves as a liaison with scientists of other states or agencies in coordinating approaches to common scientific problems.

Appointed by the Governor, Council members serve three-year terms.

The Maryland Science Week Commission was created by the Governor in February 1992 (Executive Order 01.01.1992.04). The Commission organizes and oversees a week-long series of events by which Maryland annually observes Maryland Science Week. The Week coincides with National Science and Technology Week, designated by the National Science Foundation.

Held in April, Maryland Science Week draws attention to the importance of science and technology and fosters an appreciation of them. Events of the Week also are designed to inspire students to pursue careers in science and technology.

The Commission consists of thirty members appointed to three-year terms by the Governor.
