The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments was formed in 1957 as an independent, non-profit association of officials from eighteen local governments surrounding Washington, DC; members of the Maryland and Virginia legislatures; and members of Congress. The Council functioned as a voluntary instrument for inter-local cooperation until its incorporation in 1965 as an intergovernmental agency of its participating county and municipal governments.

The Council develops regional responses to issues, such as the environment, economic development, population growth, housing, health, public safety, human relations, and family concerns. It also is designated by the federal government as the regional planning organization for metropolitan Washington, DC.

Annually, the Board is selected by appointments made by the participating local governments and by caucuses of state legislative delegations from the region. The current board consists of 27 members—four selected from the District of Columbia; three from Fairfax County; two each from Montgomery and Prince George's counties; one from each of the remaining local jurisdictions; and one member each from the Maryland and Virginia General Assemblies.

The Council is supported by financial contributions from its participating local governments, federal and state government contracts, and through donations from foundations and the private sector.
