

by the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Maryland College Park.

The Service informs and educates Marylanders about agricultural matters and alerts scientists to the needs and problems of people for further research. As the statewide, out-of-the-classroom component of the University of Maryland System, the Service is based in every county and Baltimore City. Locally, Extension Service agents work to improve agricultural profitability, promote economic stability, foster marine and aquaculture industries, and expand urban benefits of agricultural technology. Faculty are supported by State program specialists at the University of Maryland College Park, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, the Center for Environmental and Estuarine Studies, and four off-campus centers.

Within the Cooperative Extension Service, the Institute for Governmental Service provides technical assistance, consulting, and applied research to governments and nonprofit organizations in Maryland. The Institute was established jointly in 1959 by the University of Maryland and the Maryland Municipal League. Then called the Maryland Technical Advisory Service, it focused on municipal government services. By 1965, it came to include county and State government services. The Service was renamed the Institute for Governmental Service in 1981 to reflect this increased scope of its work.
