"It is certain that this Statute extended to the province, and has remained in force in the State. The first section enacted, that in and throughout all his majesty's dominions in Europe, Asia, Africa and America, the said supputation, according to which the year began on the 25th of March, should not be made use of from and after the last day of December 1751. The year 1752 was to begin the 1st of January 1752, and the day after the 2d of September 1752 was to be accounted the 14th of September. See the new Cyclopaedia, title Calendar.

"A particular account of the manner in which this act was got through the parliament, is given by lord Chesterfield in his letters to his son.

"The new style as it was called, is now fully established; but it seems to be proper that this statute, by which it was made, should be incorporated with our laws; as to that part, and as to a part of the calendar by which, among other uses, Easter day, &c. in any year are to be discovered until
