

In conclusion, I have to express the deep obligations which I have been under, during the progress of my work, to Mr. Thomas S. Alexander, now of New York, whose talents and learning no Maryland lawyer will deem it invidious — in me even — to praise. He would be displeased if I dwelt on the extent of these obligations; but I cannot refrain from thus alluding to the value, and my appreciation of the value of his advice, his suggestions, his encouragement. And I have a similar acknowledgment to make to my friend, Mr. Thales A. Linthicum, of the Baltimore Bar; but, between him and myself, nothing more is necessary to be said than — and it has been to me the most grateful alleviation of my labors — that he has all along interested himself in my work just as if it had been his own.

JULIAN J. ALEXANDER.
