¹Agreement is based on the number of elections in which the majority of electoral votes of Maryland were cast for the same candidate as the majority of electoral votes may have been respectively cast in the other states.

²States cast electoral votes in each of the nine elections during this period. If the Election of 1800, when it was the only state to cast its votes evenly, is disregarded, Maryland disagreed in presidential selection but once with Vermont (1789 when that state did not vote), New Jersey (1812), Pennsylvania (1796) and Virginia (1796).
