

actions which preceded general election defeats for their respective parties.

⁶²When Andrew Jackson, considered a Democrat, captured seven of Maryland's 11 electoral votes in 1824, the Democratic party had not been formed.