Mr. Brace submitted the following order:

WHEREAS, It appears that the cost of the Comptroller's Office to this State, in the year 1866, was $7,000, and the cost thereof in the year 1872 was $12,700, being an increase of $5,700.

And whereas, It is of importance to the public to ascertain the reason for, and justice of this large increase; therefore,

Ordered, That the Comptroller of the Treasury furnish to this House a list of the Clerks regularly employed by him in the year 1873, with their names and the amount of compensation actually paid them; also, a statement showing the amount of printing done by his order during said year, by whom done, and the actual amount paid therefor; also, a statement of the temporary clerical assistance employed by him during said year, with the names of parties employed as temporary Clerks, and the amount actually paid for their services; also, the amount actually expended by him as travelling expenses during said year in performance of the duties imposed on him by law.

And further ordered, That said several statements be furnished within ten days from this date.

Which was read.
