

ous and popular in the State. His warm heart, his genial, winning manner, and amiable temper, serene, calm, courteous and affectionate, even under the most trying ordeals, endeared him strongly, and even fondly, to all who knew him. After the heat of political strife was over, whether successful or not, he met opponent and ally with alike cordiality, and took them to heart.

This House, Mr. Speaker, and the outside world, will go on as before, engrossed with the public and private duties of life. Days, weeks and years will roll on as in the dead centuries of the past, but while the hearts of true Marylanders throb with those emotions of sympathy and love that always fill them, while memory lasts and the records of the past are handed down to our children and our children's children, the memory of Robert Fowler will be cherished with reverence and affection.

The question then recurring upon concurring in the motion submitted by Mr. Buchanan,

On motion of Mr. Seth,

The vote by which the order was adopted, on Friday last, that the House hold night sessions on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, was unanimously reconsidered.

The question then recurring upon the adoption of the order,

On motion of Mr. Seth,

The words "Wednesday and," were stricken out.

The question then recurring upon the adoption of the order as amended,

It was adopted.

Mr. Henkle proposed to amend the motion submitted by Mr. Buchanan, by striking out the words "that a Committee of eight members of this House be appointed to," and insert, "this House, in a body."

Which being accepted by Mr. Buchanan,

The motion made by Mr. Buchanan was then unanimously adopted.

And Messrs. Buchanan, Freaner, Seth, Gill and Koons appointed a Committee to draft resolutions touching the life and character of the deceased.

Mr. Stake submitted the following order:

Ordered, That a Committee of three be appointed by the Speaker to make arrangements for the funeral obsequies of the late Robert Fowler.

Which was adopted, and,
