

Section 19 of said Act specifies as among the corporations to be created under the provisions of said General Law, those "For carrying on in this State any kind of manufacturing, ship building, mechanical, industrial or chemical business, and for the sale, transportation or other disposition of the products thereof."

The Act to incorporate the "Frederick City Superphosphate Manufacturing Company" states the objects of said corporation "To be the manufacture and preparation of superphosphate of lime and all other fertilizers, the purchase of machinery and farming implements of all kinds, and the vending of said articles, for which purpose the said corporation shall have all necessary power for erecting buildings, factories, structures and machinery of every kind which shall be deemed necessary for the carrying on of such operations, and for the purchase, holding and sale of real estate in the said county necessary for the operations of said corporation, and patent rights, and shall have all the rights and powers which an individual has by law, to transport the products and proceeds of its property and operations to market, and shall have all other rights, as to its real estates, live stock and other personal property, which an individual owner of like property may lawfully exercise."

The Act of 1868, chapter 471, makes ample provision for the creation of corporations for the above specified objects, and, therefore, I think, the special Act passed for the purpose of incorporating "The Frederick City Superphosphate Manufacturing Company" is void, and feel constrained to return it for your further consideration.

The Senate then proceeded, as the Constitution provides, to reconsider the said bill returned by the Governor to the Senate with his objections, which bill is in the following words, to wit:

An Act to incorporate the Frederick City Superphosphate Manufacturing Company.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That John S. Ramsburg, Daniel Castle, of T., Joshua D. Koogle, John P. Heffner, Charles W. Miller and Louis R. Cochren, and their associates, successors and assigns, be and they are hereby created a corporation and body politic by the name and style of "The Frederick City Superphosphate Manufacturing Company, and by that name may have perpetual succession, and shall be able and capable in law to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, in any Court of Law or Equity, and to make and
