

World Wide Web site

Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein expects his agency's home page on the World Wide Web, located at www.comp.state.md.us, to offer yet another beacon of service.

Maryland tax help for individuals and businesses is now just a keystroke away for millions of PC users surfing the World Wide Web from America to Zaire.

Thanks to the home page Comptroller Goldstein installed for the State Comptroller's Office during fiscal year 1996, taxpayers and other Web browsers can find a host of useful information at the comptroller's web address - www.comp.state.md.us - from how to start a new business in Maryland to completing tax forms as a new resident to getting answers about Maryland's tax treatment of estates.

The home page offers downloadable tax forms and helpful information for tax practitioners, businesses and individual taxpayers. It will also allow users to search the most recently reported list of owners of unclaimed funds.

Maryland tax information can also be accessed at another pit stop on the information highway - SAILOR, Maryland's online information system.
