

In an attachment against one partner as an absconding debtor, the other partner being summoned, the assets of the firm can not be condemned on a partnership debt. Johnston v. Matthews, 32 Md. 368.

Where an attachment on original process is sued out against a partnership and levied on partnership property, and one of the partners absconds so that the writ can not be served on him, the remaining partner represents the firm and the attachment is valid. Thomas v. Brown, 67 Md. 519.

Where an attachment is levied against partnership property on a debt alleged to be due by the firm, but the judgment of condemnation is entered against one partner only, the attachment will be quashed. Boyd v. Wolf, 88 Md. 342.

As to joint obligations and tenancies, see art. 50.
