

124, in the manner designated and required in section 125, may, in their discretion, looking to the public interest, invest any amount standing to the credit of the sinking fund, in the new jail bonds, but the new jail bonds shall not be destroyed or cancelled, as is required in the case of the original bonds in section 125, but shall be safely held and kept by them in some secure place; and if in the opinion of the commissioners it shall be necessary to re-issue the jail bonds at a later date, the same shall be done, and the proceeds thereof applied to the extinguishment of the original debt, from which source they may have been temporarily diverted, leaving the jail bonds to be finally extinguished in the manner set forth in the act of 1882, chapter 316, authorizing and creating the debt for the erection of a new jail in the county.

127. The county commissioners shall, in each and every year, levy upon the assessable property such sum of money as may be necessary to pay the interest on the outstanding bonds issued by them under the provisions of the act of 1882, chapter 316, authorizing the building of a new jail for Dorchester county, as the same shall fall due; and in addition to the annual interest, after five years from the date of issuing said bonds, they shall levy in each and every year such further and additional sums as may be required to gradually retire and redeem such bonds until they shall all have been redeemed; provided, that after the lapse of the said five years, they shall not levy in each and every year less than one-tenth of the original principal sum of said bonds for their redemption.

128. They are authorized to contract with and designate two or more newspapers printed at Cambridge, in said county, to publish the public local laws applying to Dorchester county; provided, that the total cost of publishing said public local laws for any one session shall not exceed one hundred dollars.

1886, ch. 55.

129. They shall, in each and every year, levy upon the assessable property of Dorchester county, such sums of money as may
