

and take his receipt for the same, and require every such officer to make to them, once in every three months, a return of his proceedings under this sub-title of this article, upon oath, exhibiting an exact statement of the amount of money received by him for said period, the number of licenses received by him, when and to whom issued by him, and the number still in his hands unissued.

1872, ch. 154.

125. Every such constable shall be entitled to ten per centum of the amount collected and accounted for by him, fifty cents for each and every dog killed by him, and to one-half of the fines recovered, as hereinafter provided, upon his information and evidence, under the provisions of this sub-title of this article.

Ibid.

126. Every such constable who shall neglect or refuse to discharge the duties imposed upon him by this sub-title of this article, shall be liable to a fine of five dollars and costs, for each and every case of failure or refusal to perform his said duties, to be recovered by an action before any justice of the peace of said county, whose duty it shall be to collect said fines, to pay over one-half thereof to the informer and the other half to the county commissioners, who may allow such compensation for such duty as may be reasonable and just.

Ibid.

127. The bond of every constable shall be liable for the amounts received by him, under the provisions of this sub-title of this article; and it shall be the duty of the county commissioners to proceed against the bond of every such officer who shall fail promptly to pay over the money received by any such officer under the provisions of this sub-title of this article, by the most summary process now authorized by law.

Ibid.

128. If any person shall steal, entice or carry away any dog whose owner shall have complied with the provisions of this sub-title of this article, every such person shall be deemed guilty of larceny, and upon prosecution and conviction thereof by any
