

1878, ch 241.

239. All fines and forfeitures imposed by the ordinances of the corporation shall be recoverable before the burgess or any justice of the peace, but no fine or forfeiture imposed under any ordinance of said corporation shall exceed the sum of twenty dollars; and the said burgess and commissioners are empowered to erect a lock-up for the temporary custody of prisoners on their way to the county jail, and for the confinement of persons arrested for violating any town ordinance, or for the non-payment of any fine imposed under the provisions of this charter, or for the confinement of persons committed by justices of the peace of the said town or vicinity, either for further hearing or until such persons can be conveyed to the county jail.

Ibid.

240. Any person may take up and impound any live stock or geese found going at large in said town, and the owner shall pay, on reclaiming the same, the sum of twenty-five cents for each head of live stock, and five cents for each goose, for every twenty-four hours the same may have been impounded; provided, that when any geese or live stock are impounded they shall be advertised by notices set up at two of the most public places within said town.

1880, ch. 350.

241. The ferry across the Potomac river at Hancock, established under the act of 1880, chapter 350, shall be kept for public use and benefit by the county commissioners, under such regulation as they shall prescribe; and they shall make such provision, annually, as may in their judgment be necessary for the same; and they shall have power and authority to raise money by levy for maintenance of said ferry.

HUCKSTERS.

1867, ch. 272.

242. It shall not be lawful for any persons, not permanent residents of this State, to come into Washington county, for the purpose of carrying on the business of huckstering, by gathering butter, eggs, poultry, etc., without having first obtained from the clerk of the circuit court for said county, a license therefor.
