

and close, straighten, improve, grade and pave streets; restrain all disorders and disturbances; apprehend and fine all vagabonds, and may impose fines, penalties and forfeitures for the violation of their ordinances.

1888, ch. 460.

44. They shall have full power to make such ordinances and regulations as they may deem expedient for the comfort, health and safety of said town, relating to the condition, location and construction of all buildings, of whatever kind, whether erected or proposed, and failure to comply with such ordinances and regulations within thirty days after being notified of the same in writing, shall be punishable by a fine of not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

1870, ch. 5.

45. They may open, close, straighten or widen streets across or through any yard, orchard or garden within the corporate limits of the town.

Ibid.

46. Before they proceed to open, widen or straighten any street, they shall appoint three disinterested citizens of said town, owners of real estate therein, to be examiners, who shall give notice of the time, place and purpose of their appointment, by setting up a notice thereof, at three public places in said town, at least ten days before the time of their meeting; and said examiners shall lay off said street according to instructions given them by the commissioners of Berlin, and shall value the damages done to each owner of property injured by the opening, straightening or widening of said street, and shall make to the said commissioners a return in writing of their assessment of damages, with a plat of the street as laid out by them.

Ibid.

47. The commissioners may ratify or reject the report of the examiners making a return of the damages assessed by them.

Ibid.

48. Any person aggrieved by the amount of damages assessed by said examiners, and ratified by said commissioners, may appeal at any time within six months after said final ratification, to the
