

and pay for each and every horse, cow or ox so impounded, the sum of fifty cents, and the expense of impounding the same, and for each and every hog, goat or sheep, the sum of twenty-five cents, and expense as aforesaid, then it shall be lawful for the bailiff to sell the animal so impounded, at public sale, and after deducting the fine and expenses as aforesaid, to pay the remainder over to the treasurer of the town, who shall pay the same to the owners of the animals so sold, when they shall satisfactorily prove ownership; and in case no person appears and proves ownership within twelve months from said sale, then the said treasurer shall place the money so received, to the credit of and for the general uses and benefit of the town.

183. The common council may impose such fines, penalties and forfeitures for breach of their laws and ordinances as they may think proper, not exceeding the sum of ten dollars for any one offence; and they may pass all laws or ordinances necessary to give effect and operation to the powers vested in them.

Ibid.

184. They shall annually appoint a bailiff, which appointment shall be approved by the mayor; and before said bailiff enters upon the duties of his office he shall make oath before a justice of the peace that he will faithfully and impartially perform the duties imposed upon him by this sub-title of this article, and the by-laws and ordinances of the said mayor and common council; and he shall execute to the mayor and common council of the town, a bond with two good and sufficient securities, to be approved by the mayor and common council, in such penalty as they shall prescribe, conditioned that he shall well and truly and faithfully perform the duties of his office, and shall pay to the treasurer of the town all sums of money that may be collected by him for the use of the corporation; it shall be the duty of the bailiff to preserve order and to enforce the ordinances of the town, and to immediately arrest any and all persons whom he may see violating the provisions of this sub-title, or of the laws and ordinances governing the town, and to take the person so arrested before the mayor or any justice of the peace residing in the town,
