

CHAPTER 208.

AN ACT to change the boundary line and transfer certain territory and population from Dorchester to Caroline county.

Preamble

WHEREAS the town of Federalsburg stands upon the dividing line between Dorchester and Caroline counties, and divers difficulties in connection with the maintenance of the public schools, and the proper administration of justice, are experienced from said circumstance; and, whereas, for the above and divers other reasons, what purports to be an immense majority, to wit: every voter of the seventy voters residing within the limits of the territory proposed to be transferred have petitioned the General Assembly of Maryland to change the boundary line between said counties, and transfer that part of Dorchester county, hereinafter particularly described, to Caroline county, the same being the Dorchester side of the said town of Federalsburg and the country immediately adjacent thereto; therefore,

Courses and distances.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That all that part of Dorchester county, to wit: beginning at a point on Main street, in the town of Federalsburg, where Bridge street terminates, and which is an intersection of a boundary between Dorchester county and Caroline county (marked "A" on the plat prepared by John B. Isler, a surveyor of Caroline county, dated January twenty-second, A. D., eighteen hundred and eighty), and thence running with said Main street, which is the present division line of said counties, the following courses, viz: north eight degrees west, thirty-one perches; north thirty degrees west, thirty-nine perches; north forty-six degrees west, thirty-two perches; thence, still with the county road and present boundary line between the said counties, north sixty-one degrees west, twelve perches; north eighty-two degrees west, seventy-six perches and twelve links; north eighty-four and one half degrees west, nineteen
