

It is no time for us to be complacent, however. Each one of us, individually and in the respective groups to which we belong, must do our part to see that we keep definitely in mind the problems facing us, and that we are prepared to do the things, to make the sacrifices required to meet the situation effectively. America is too glorious a country, America has been too generous to her citizens to ever face a time when her sons and daughters will fail in any emergency to guard our priceless possessions of liberty and democracy.
